Continued from First Page. current questions of politics from authentic public documents. It was a rather remarkable speech. Probably no convention that had business to trans act was ever before so long detained from its work by the delivery of a speech. It was entirely sound on Democratic principles, eminently dignified, perfeetly straight-forward and intelligible in its characterization of the bad man Butler, and a great deal longer than the moral law.

Nothing could have attested more satisfactorily the respectability of the convention than its be havior during the greater part of the delivery of the oration. The fellows who got up at 4 o'clock in the morning at Worcester, and stole Mechanics' Hall and deflowered the Massachusetts Democracy never would have sat through a quarter of it without interrupting it with motions that the further reading be dispensed with. But these delegates sat in the suffocating atmosphere of Fancuil Hali and mopped their bald heads, and for the first hour or so put on the appearance of profound interest. Their decent and patient behavior was very creditable to them. Along toward the latter part of the exercise, however, many of the aged delegates went to sleep, and others kept themselves awake by conversation. But the General kept on undisturbed until somebody, probably a Butler man who had gained surreptitious entrance, made an andible and impatient remark, at which the General stopped short, and said he had prepared this speech with a great deal of care, and knew it was interesting, that he was going to deliver it any way, and if there was anybody there who did not want to hear it, he could go out. This burst of candor was well received, and the old gentleman took a fresh start. He did finally stop, though it looked at one time as though the November election would overtake him in his perciation.

A LITTLE SPICE IN THE PROCEEDINGS. Then came the real business. A delegate moved for a ballot for Governor; and Mr. Leverett Saltonstall moved that Judge Abbott, whom he eulogized as a man with a National reputation, be nominated by acclamation.

At this point there were several delegates on the floor attempting to be heard, and there was considerable confusion

A lot of Butler men got in and were scattered among the spectators at the rear of the hall, and one of them, a young lawyer named Cook, a Butler Republican, it is said, who was an active member of the Worcester Convention last week, came up the middle aisle vociferating "Mr. President," shaking his fist at the convention, which was trying to howl him down, and demanding a hearing. What he him down, and demanding a hearing. What he said or wanted to say, no one could make out. It was drowned in the uproar. The chairman, who presided like a rear-admiral, hammered for order and called upon the police to put out the intruder, and in a very few moments the policemen came in and bouveed him out with all his eloquence and indignation in him. This little circumstance was the only thing that redeemed the respectable dulness of the occasion.

Judge Abbott was nominated by acclamation, and the rest of the ticket was nominated in the same way on the report of the committee which had been appointed for that purpose.

appointed for that purpose.

The resolutions, which were adopted without dissent, will appear in the dispatches to the general press.

There is, of course, no hope of electing the ticket. That was admitted to be impossible. The great thing now is to bring the ticket in second in the race, and of that there does not at present seem to be any probability.

A LARGE AND HAPPY CONVENTION. THE DETAILS OF THE PROCEEDINGS-GENERAL FELICITATION AND GREAT ENTHUSIASM. IGENERAL PRESS DISPATCEL!

Boston, Sept. 25 .- The Democratic State Convention met in Fancuil Hall at 11 o'clock this forenoon, pursuant to the adjournment voted by the State Central Committee at Worcester. The body of the hall was well filled. Admission to the galleries was was well filled. Admission to the galleries was gained only by tickets furnished by the State Central Committee. Edward Avery, Leverett Saltonstall and other prominent members of the party appeared on the platform, and were greeted with cheers. General Whitney came in later, and was enthusiastically cheered.

At twenty-three minutes past 11 o'clock Mr. Avery called the convention to order. He referred to the adjournment from Worcester, and said:

DELEGATES: Not only do your represent the Democration, to be continued by your action to day, you maintain connection between the Democratic party which, in the last Presidential campaign, elected a majority of the Lower House of Congress, secured for the next Congress a majority in the Senate, elected ta candidates for President by a clear majority of the electoral votes and by a popular majority of more than 300,000—the party which, if we read the signs of the times aright, is destined to control the legislation of the Nation henceforth, and, after the expiration of the term of the present defacts Administration, is to wield the whole power of the Nation. Upon you and upon those whom you represent, the the expiration of the term of the present de facto Administration, is to wield the whole power of the Nation. Upon you and upon those whom you represent, the faithful adherents to our Democratic principles will descend the glory and honors of this great triumph.

Ex-Mayor Prince being escorted to the platform, was greeted with cheers. THE UTILITY OF A STATE COMMITTEE,

Mr. Saunders, of Lawrence, moved the appointment of a committee from each Congressional district to report the members of the State Committee at large.

Mr. Fitzgerald, of Boston, said he believed that forty members of the State Central Committee, one from each Senatorial district, were sufficient to do the work of the Democratic party, and he moved an indefinite postpone-ment of the motion. [Applause.]

The question was then put by the chair, and the mo-tion to postpone indefinitely was lost by a large vote. The motion of Mr. Saunders then prevailed, and the committee to nominate the State Central Committee was appointed by districts as follows:

Charles G. Davis, of Plymouth: Edward P. Read, of Asington; James W. Coleman, of Hoston; Michael F. Wells, of Rosson; E. A. Ingalls, of Lymn; S. M. Currier, of Haverhill; Caleb Saunders, of Lawrence; William Asphwall, of Brookline; George W. Gill, of Worcester; Henry F. Nash, of Greenfield; Reuben Noble, of Westfield.

Mr. Aspinwall, of Brookline, asked the convention to excuse his serving on the committee, but the convenaion refused by a large vote to accept his declination. Mr. Russell, from the Committee on Credentials, re orted that 204 cities and towns were represented by 1,264 delegates | great applause |, after which some per-son shouled, "Doubted !"

GENERAL WHITNEY DENOUNCES BUTLER. General Luther Stephenson, jr., then reported the fol lowing list of gentlemen for the permanent organization of the meeting : President, General James 8. Whitney of Boston (with sixty-nine vice-presidents); secretaries, J. Samuel, N. Dyer, Godfrey Morse, Charles A Prince, John H. Duane, and Henry Nelson of Greenfield. There was great applianse. The name of General Whitney and the names of many of the vice-presidents were applauded, and a delegate asked if this convention was made of Bos-

The report was accepted, and the Chair appointed Mr. F. O. Prince and Leverett Saltonstall as a committee to nduct General Whitney to the chair.

General Whitney addressed the convention. Before he had concluded reading his manuscript, there was some disapprobation manifested at the rear of the hall at its length; but when, after apologizing that he was obliged to write his remarks, he announced emphatically that he should read them ithrough, there was a burst of ap-plause. When he reached a large page, and remarked, "I have got most through," there was another round of applause, and some one called for three cheers, which were not given. The noise became so great, however, that General Whitney was obliged to ask for silence; and at 1:20 p. m., when he closed, a round of applause

General Whitney began by saying : Gentlemen-Within these walls and under this roof we seed no warlike weapons of defeace. The government of this city is sufficient guarantee to you of personal safety and full protection while you are engaged in orderly deliberation this day. No mob can bere interfere with your legislation, no ruffian threats of bloodshed and use of brute force can shape, or in the slightest degree influence your action. No such document as that which shut the doors of Mechanics' Hall against you at Worcester, will ever emanate from the honorable Mayor of Boston. No! not yet are all our cities and towns so far buildozed by the mobs which follow a self-nominated aspirant to the Gubernatorial chair that the regular delegates to the State Democratic Convention shall be informed, in writing, that a mob cannot be removed from a hall precentaged by the regular Democratic State Committee for the State Delegate Convention. Gentlemon—Here let me say that this convention is, and as soon as facts in the case are examined, will be pronounced by every fair-minded man to be the only regularly-organized Democratic State Convention holden in Massachusetts this year of our Lord 1878. I will, however, detain you a short time to consider the principles whice distinguish us from the Butler party, and from other political organizations. The Democratic party believes that the institution of government is to secure the existence of the body politic; to protect it, and to furnish individuals who compose it with the power of enjoying in safety and tranquillity their natural rights and blessings of life; that majorities are to be restrained and minorities protected within the limits of constitutional law. Mark the contrast. The Democratic party believes in ascertaining the will of majorities through the forms of law prescribed and defined by the constitutional organization under which our fathers established the system of American civil liberty. Butler and his followers believe in using temporary and excited nominal majorities without regard to forms of law. General Whitney then took up Butler's financial policy,

Men of Massachusetts, think you that our ancient and Men of Massachusetts, think you that our ancient and honorable Commonwealth has reached a pass where a man who preaches such doctrines of infamy as the way to discharge the honest indebtedness of the United States Government can hoist himself by self-appointed nomination into the Gubernatorial chair of Massachusetts 1 No; emphatically no. Massachusetts' intelligence and integrity have sunk to no such depth of infamy, and we will stand by our honor and our promises to pay with all the abulty which God has given us, and with all the means with which our kind Heavenly Father has endowed us, to repay our creditors who lent us money with which to maintain our liberties when in danger, growing out of the Civil War. Talk about the greenbackism of Democratic statesners and the greenbackism of Benjamin F. Butler. They differ as light differs from darkness, as honesty differs from villany, as religion differs from irreligion, as the greenbacks proposed by Thurman, of Ohio, always redeemable in gold and silver, differ from the greenbacks of Benjamin F. Butler, which are not redeemable in anything.

General Whitney next discussed the question of tariff, which he considered "the most insidious and costly mode of taxation yet devised to swallow up the earnings of of taxation yet devised to swallow up the earnings of consumers and to maintain an army of tax-gatherers and spics." General Butler's record as a paid attorney of the Union Pacific Rallroad Company, in securing land-grants for the benefit of "bondholding aristocrats," to the exclusion of poor farmers, and his championship of "Crédit Mobilier," were next discussed, and, flually, the subject of State expenditures, in which he criticised Butler's personal extravagance.

THE NEW STATE COMMITTEE. Mr. Aspinwall reported the following to serve on the State Central Committee at Large:

The name of Wm. Aspinwall, of Brookline, was added The report was then accepted. NOMINATIONS-CLOSING SCENES,

Mr. Levere tt Saltonstall, then nominated Josiah G. Abbott for Governor. The theering at the mention of the name was very great.

Speeches were made for and sgainst Judge Abbott; and, amid numerous eries of "Question," the chair called on every delegate to vote one way or another. A tremendous "Aye" was given in favor of the nomination of Judge Abbott by acclamation, with but half-adozen "Navs." Mr. Cowley, from the committee appointed to nominate the rest of the State ticket, reported the following ames:

For Lieutenant-Governor-William P. Plunkett, of Pittsfield.

For Secretary of State-Heary C. Dewing, of Holyoke.

For Treasurer and Receiver-General David N. Skilling, of Vinchester, For Auditor-John E. Fitzgerald, of Boston, For Attorney-General-Richard Olney, of Boston, The report was adopted without a dissenting vote.

Mr. Reuben Noble, of Westfield, made a motion that the Democratic Committees throughout the State be requested, in calling their several conventions and caucuses, to address their call to all Democrats who propose to support the candidate nominated by the no-tion of this convention [cheers]; and that when any such committee opposes the nomination of this conven-tion, the members of the several councilor, senatorial and district conventions be authorized to exclude such nearbors from the conventions.

The convention then adjourned.

THE PLATFORM.

THE PLANKS, FRAUD, GENERAL DEPRAVITY OF THE REPUBLICANS, FREE TRADE AND ECONOMY. [GENERAL PRESS DISPATCH.]

Boston, Sept. 25 .- The resolutions adopted by the Democratic State Convention at Fancuil Hall to-day are as follows:

the Democratic State Convention at Faneuil Hall to-day are as follows:

The Democrats of Massachusetts, through their delegates assembled in convention in Faneuil Hall, declare that the National Democratic party is the party of the people and of the Constitution; that the purpose of its existence and the bond of its unity consist in its devotion to the principles of restricting and localizing the powers of the Government in the State and Nation. Applying that rule to the present political questions in which our people are interested, we.

Resolve, That the Republicans of Massachusetts, by their failure to condemn the plot to capture the Presidency while that plot was in process of accomplishment, and by their tacit approval of the result of it, and sharing in the benefits derived from that result, have shown themselves utterly unfaithful to the maxim of our own State Convention, and are not entitled to call upon any Democratic or independent citizen to act with their party or vote for their candidates; that the constant policy of the Republican party throughout the United States has had a tendency to centralize the powers of government in Washington; that the party has disregarded the admitted rights of the States and of the people, and as a final act of usurpation it has defrauded both States and people out of their constitutionally elected Chief Magistrate, and imposed upon the country a man whose only title to that office is derived through legislation agreed to by the Democratic members of Congress and assented to by the people in the interests of peace and in the belief that a solemnly constituted tribunal appointed to carry out the law without regard to party rendered a decision in accordance with fucts as ascertained by judicial investigation.

That the disregard of the first limitations of the Massachusetts, without restriction by Constitutional or legal enactments. Prepayment of a politax as a qualification for voting is in violation of every principle of equal rights, and ought no longer to be required; and white we favor all reasonable regulations to protect the purity of the ballot, we declare that the laws passed by Republican Legislatures in recent years, tending to hinder and obstruct the most ample exercise of the elective tranchise by our citizens, deserve the condemnation of all lovers of true liberty and free suffrage.

We demand that there shall be no further increase of State dobt, and that measures for its gradual reduction and final extinction shall be rigidly enforced. We demand that conditional provisions be made to restrain States, counties and municipalities from increasing their debts in time of peace. We demand the abolition of all unnecessary offices, and the reduction of expenses, as necessary offices, and the reduction of expenses, as necessary offices, and the reduction of expenses, of peace. We demand the abolition of all unnecessary offices, and the reduction of expenses, as necessary offices, and the reduction of expenses, as necessary for the well-being of the people. We demand that Massachusetts shall observe her obligations to other States, so that our Commonwealth shall not be made a safe asylum for refugees from public justice. The Democratic party, in sustaining throughout its entire history the great principle of equal and exact justice to all men, has ever been the truest friend of the laboring classes, and we demand the overthrow of monopoles, and the enactment and execution of such laws as shall protect the rights of labor as well as those of capital, not discriminating against either, but framed for the mutual benefit of both. That the process for the collecting of debts, known as the 'trustee process,' operates with special severity upon the labor collecting of debts, known as the "trustee pro-cess," operates with special severity upon the labor-ing classes, we therefore demand the passage of a law exempting the wages of the laborer from at-tachment. That the platform here adopted, and the candidates here nominated, are the platform and candidates of the Democratic party of Massa-chusetts, in alliance with the National Democratic party, and the pretence that any candidates nomi-nated by any other party or body of men represented the Democratic party is utterly false and fraudulent. We summon all true Democrats to rally to the sup-port of the candidates this day nominated, because they alone represent the principles and organiza-tion of the time-honored National Democratic party.

SHOOTING WITH NO COMPETITORS.

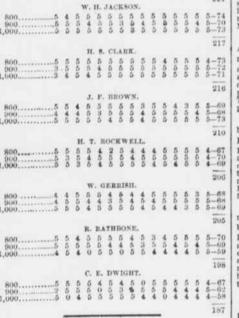

THE AMERICAN TEAM AND THE INTERNATIONAL TROPHY-J. S. SUMNER MAKES THE LARGEST

SCORE EVER RECORDED. The third annual contest for the international trophy was begun yesterday at Creedinoor, the conditions of the match being the same as those governing it heretofore, viz.: fifteen shots for each competitor at each of the three distances-800, 900 and 1,000 yards -on two successive days. The members of the team and the reserves were at the firing points, at the 800 yards ready to begin the shooting at 11 o'clock.

Jackson opened the shooting at 800 yards, making a bull's-eye." The team fired in the usual slow and de-"bull's-eye." The team fired in the disal slow and substitute of the points he he will back position in shooting, and at the end of 800 yards their total was 563, five points behind the first day's total in 1877, and thirteen points sheriffer "bull's-eyes"; Jackson was one point short: Dwight "missed" on his ninth shot. At the 900 yards range, Sumner made four more "bull's-eyes," making numeteen in succession, and then made a "ceutre," after which he made to more "bull's-eyes," being one point short of a full score at the two ranges. The total scores at the two ranges were one point more than those of the first day last year, and thirteen points behind the second day's shooting. At 1,000 yards Jackson sgain opened with a "bull's-eye." Great inter est was manifested in the scores of Jackson and Sumner at this range, owing to the possibility of either winning the prize of $150 in gold othered by the Sharps Rifle Company to any one who would make a better score than that of L. C. Bruce hast year in the International Match—210 in a possible 225—with a Sharps rifle, in any match during the season at long ranges. At the finish it was discovered that Sumner had made 221, which is the best score ever made on any range in the world, he having made 41 "bull's-eyes" and 4 "centres" in the 45 shots. The scores at this range made the total 1,660, dve points greater than the first day of last year. The shooting will be continued to-day.

Blake, of Orange, for Congress. The convention was called to order by Herman Lehlback, chairman of the last convention, and E. R. Pennington again acted as secretary. The chairman, in the course of an earnest speech, announced that Cortlandt Parker had declined, but that the convention had no need to a pologize, for it had shown that it sougat to nominate the best men. The declination of Mr. Parker was accepted. Nominations were then called for, and the following names were presented: John P. Jackson, Albert P. Condit, E. L. Joy, John L. Blake, Judge C. A. OBITUARY. COLONEL JAMES ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

Colonel James Alexander Hamilton, the oldest surviving son of Alexander Hamilton, died at his residence near Irvington, Westchester County, on Tuesday, in the ninety-first year of his age. He had the erect figure, clear eye and mellow voice of his father. Colonel Hamilton won his military title in the War of 1812. After the war he began the practice of law. He was Minister to Russia under President Jackson, but aside from that be never filled any political offlice of importance. Though living quietly as a private citizen, his knowledge and good judgment were known and sought after, and during the late war President Lincoln asked his advice on more than one critical occasion. He stood fully five feet ten inches in height, and was much given to all kinds of manly oxercises. He spent forty-eight years at "Nevis," his homestead near livington-on-the-Hudson. It originally comprised several hundred scres, but some years ago it was cut into three portions; one being given to his daughter, Mrs. George L. Schuyler; a second to another daughter, Mrs. R. L. Biatchford, and a third was sold. He had three daughters. Mrs. Schuyler and Mrs. Blatchford are dead, and the third daughter married the husband of her deceased sister, Mrs. Schuyler. The Colonel was marr ed to his second wife, a daughter of Robert Morris, an old resident of Irvington. He has two surviving brothers, John C., aged eighty-eight, who lives in Twentieth-st., in this city, and Pullp, age seventy-six, of Poughkeepste.
